AT LEAST 372 MIDSOUTH FIRMS are currently producing chips for sale to pulp mills, according to information gathered in mid-1962. Alabama leads other States with 136. Mississippi has 71 installations, Arkansas 62, Louisiana 54, Texas 35, Tennessee 11, and Oklahoma 3. An additional 16 sawmills are equipped with log barkers only.

Sawmill residues are the main source of raw material for more than 90 percent of the Midsouth's chipping installations. The rest largely depend upon wood-preserving plants, veneer mills, and box plants.

The use of plant waste has rocketed since the first commercial chipping facility was opened in 1952 at a sawmill in Bradley County, Arkansas. By the end of 1953, a dozen southern sawmills were in the business; their combined annual output totaled 19,000 cord-equivalents. Thereafter the volume rose swiftly and steadily, until by 1961 it was 1,620,000 cords. Alabama is the leading producer, with Arkansas and Texas next (fig. 1). Today chips comprise 15 percent of the Midsouth's entire pulpwood production (fig. 2).

Eighty-eight percent of the chips are southern pine. Hardwood sales are presently handicapped by the need to separate species for most pulping processes. Nevertheless the rate of increase from 1960 to 1961 was 22 percent for hardwoods as compared to 9 percent for pine.

The spectacular rise in chip manufacture has created some concern about future markets for pulpwood bolts. As is shown by figure 3, however, the annual rate of increase in chip output peaked in 1957, and since then has steadily declined. In the near future, the trends should closely parallel those for lumber output.

Producers of pulp chips were paid 23 million dollars for their 1961 deliveries. The 1953 receipts were less than a half million dollars (fig. 4). Prices in open-market transactions have remained relatively stable during the past 5 years. The averages in 1961 were $6.30 per ton for pine and $4.98 for hardwood. Nearly 90 percent of all chips are sold screened.

Of the Midsouth's 33 pulp companies, 23 purchased chips in 1961. Their combined purchases accounted for 91 percent of the region's chip output. The rest went to 7 companies in Florida, Georgia, Illinois, and North Carolina. Half of the 30 companies accepted both pine and hardwood, 37 percent only pine, and 13 percent only hardwood.

Nearly three-fourths of the material is pulped within the State in which it is manufactured. Some 91 percent of Texas' chipped material is used by in-State mills—the highest proportion for any Midsouth State (fig. 5).

Most companies sell to only one pulp firm, but 25 marketed chips to 2 establishments in 1961, and 5 firms delivered to 3 customers apiece.

Pulp chips move primarily by rail car and truck. Airline distances of shipments to markets range up to 340 miles. Of the total number of chipping establishments active in 1962, 8 percent are within 20 miles of receiving pulp mills, 44 percent within 20 to 59 miles, 30 percent within 60 to 99 miles, and 17 percent within 100 to 199 miles; 1 percent of the total ship more than 200 miles.

Tables 1 through 7 identify the 372 Midsouth wood-using firms (fig. 6) that are equipped with machinery for converting plant residues into pulp chips. Also included are the 16 sawmills with log barkers only. Companies are listed by State, county, and nearest town. If a company makes chips from the residues of more than one plant at the same location, each type of plant at that location is listed. Plants are coded as follows:

- S Sawmill
- V Veneer mill
- T Wood-preserving plant
- C Chipping concentration yard
- R Roundwood chipping yard
- O Other plant

Though an effort was made to locate all installations active in 1962, a few may have been overlooked or misclassified. Omission of a firm, therefore, is no reflection upon its activities. Nor does inclusion constitute a recommendation.
